

To protect their investment and potential exposure, stakeholders must be able to react quickly to changes in their investment company's performance and marketplace. Poor financial control and a lack of meaningful management information, strained relations and loss of confidence in management are key indicators of financial distress. This is when it is crucial for stakeholders to take action to protect value.

Business Advisory

When a business is underperforming, all stakeholders must react with speed; it is crucial to make informed decisions. Reliable and comprehensive information is critical to that decision making process.

'Our starting point in advising any business, is that insolvency should be the last option considered and only after all the other possibilities have been exhausted. We have a track record of identifying and implementing consensual work outs, which preserve the business in tact and the jobs it supports, while maximising value for stakeholders.'
